LOCAL FARMER SELLS FIRST FLAX

Norman Wolfman delivered the first load of 1956 flax at the local Pool elevator recently. A good yield was reported on the field and the quality and weight of the flax was also good.

Nearly 80% of harvesting in this district has been completed with flax making up the major part of crops yet uncut.

FORMER LOCAL LADY PASSES

Mrs. Maude Catherine Wurster, 78, of Strathmore died Friday in the Calgary General Hospital.

Mrs. Wurster was born in England and moved to Canada in 1895, moving to Alberta in 1915. She operated the postoffice and general store at Lathom for several years until moving to Strathmore three years ago. She was predeceased by her husband, Moss V. in Bassano in 1934. She is survived by 6 daughters and 2 sons.

Funeral services were held from St. Mary's Anglican Church on Tuesday at 2:30 P.M. with interment following in the family plot in the Bassano cemetery. Smith Funeral Home had charge of arrangements.

TOWN TOPICS

Constable Cliff Mashford is spending three weeks leave at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Mashford.

Cliff is stationed at the RCMP detachment at Charlesworth, Manitoba.

Charlie Hayes has returned from a two weeks holiday spent in Saskatchewan.

Work has commenced on the construction of a new residence for L.E. Stewart. Goodrich and Trieber are the contractors on the job.

Clarence L. Hughes, who died in Calgary recently, might be remembered by old timers of this district. He farmed in the Bassano area over 50 years ago.

Allie says, "They say that Youth has everything. Not so when it comes to "entertaining the troops". What do you say Mr. Ben Plumer Senior? A big pat on the back to you!"

Ye editor had a sneak preview of the interior of the new Bassano Evangelical Free Church recently. It is beautifully finished inside and has the appearance of having been constructed by hands who loved their task. Perhaps, however, that was to be expected as the foreman in charge of the construction was the Church's Pastor, Rev. Leon A. Tiede.

The Bassano - Cluny versus Drumheller Football game on Sunday ended in a victory for the visitors. Score? Why bring that up - well 20 - 6. The local club is improving though.

The derrick for the new oil well is on the location and operations will commence shortly.

The Infant and Child Health clinic will be held in the Bassano Armouries on Thursday, October 11th from 1:30 to 3:30 P.M.

Fire Prevention Week this year is from October 7th to 13th. Do you suppose the Bassano Fire Department will celebrate the occasion by holding a practice run?

It is reported that all domestic stocks of liquor in the Alberta Liquor Stores will soon advance in price approximately 15%.

That will make it the highest priced water in the world.

All business establishments will remain closed on Monday, Thanksgiving Day.

Don't forget the big Football Club Dance in the Bassano Hall on Friday, October 12th. Music by the Four Hits and a Miss and lots of fun for everyone. Proceeds of the dance will be used to defray expenses of the Football Club.

NEW DELHI BEMUSED BY LEFTOVER STATUES

India is trying to decide what to do with hundreds of statues of British kings, generals, and administrators, and other reminders of British rule which dot the country.

Since this country gained its independence, many Indians have been asking for the removal of these statues.

The government, while echoing the sentiments of the public, has yet to take a final decision. They are still undecided whether to retain the statues and monuments in their present places or to remove them to museums.

There are, however, some Indians who want the statues to remain where they are.

"We are a mature nation and we should not be over-sensitive," they say. "After all, these statues are part of India's history."

The Ministry of Education, which is in charge of the monuments and statues, has asked the state governments for their views on the final disposal. Several state governments have expressed differing views in their replies.

Madras has replied that they would like some of the British statues in the state to be removed while preserving others in their present places.

Explaining the state's view, C. Subramaniam, the State Finance Minister, told the Madras legislative assembly that the statues would serve as "useful reminders of India's former political slavery," and should be preserved "lest India should slip again into slavery."

Andhra state, on the other hand, has suggested that the statues should not be disturbed at all.

Uttar Pradesh, the biggest state in India, is of the view that Commonwealth sentiment should be taken into consideration while taking any step to remove relics of British rule from the country.

As soon as the views of all the states are in, the Education Ministry is expected to formulate a policy.

Press campaign

A section of the Indian press has been campaigning sporadically for some time to remove all the British statues from parks and other public places.

To remove all the statues and memorials of British rule would create wide gaps in parks, public gardens, government offices, and buildings all over the country.

In Calcutta, the vast central park called the Maidan has more than a dozen statues of British general and administrators—Mayo Harding, Peel, Canning, John Lawrence, to mention a few.

In New Delhi, the marble statue of King George V still stands at the entrance to Kingsway, the two-mile avenue leading to the residence of Indian President Prasad, although the avenue now is called Raj Path or State Avenue.

The statue of King Edward VII stands near the Red Fort, dominating one of the most frequented parks in the old city.

The statue of Lord Roberts, one-time commander-in-chief of the Indian Army, stands before the residence of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, who has taken over the official residence of the commander-in-chief.

If India decides to remove these statues, the gaps left by them would have to be filled by pieces of Indian sculpture.

The statues of King George V and Queen Mary, which stood in the facade of the President's house, have been boarded up and flower pots now stand on them. They will be moved to the National Museum now under construction in New Delhi.

Crooked teeth

Crooked teeth may be prevented in most cases by dental care during early childhood. The first visit to the dentist should start at the age of three, so that any cavity or other defects may be repaired. It is not often realized that many children as young as three years have dental caries and that these may effect the second set of teeth unless they receive dental care. Milk, cheese and vitamin D are important factors in the development of good teeth.

Make this knife box of pine or maple and use it for fruit or attach it to the stand and carry it here and there with books or mending. The stand has handy pull-out shelves. Both pieces are made with pattern 281 which will be mailed for 35c. This pattern is one of five in the Packet of Reproductions of Pine and Maple Antiques for $1.50.

Braided rag rug

The original of the oval braided rag rug shown above was known as "The Rug That Grew Up with the Family". When first used it was scarcely large enough for a table for two. It grew a little at a time. It was planned to be 10 feet long and eight wide. The first or center row was, therefore, made two feet long or the difference between the length and width of the finished rug to be. In the early stages it was rather long and narrow but each winter it grew until it reached the planned size. Space is not available here to tell you of the vast deal of rug-making lore contained in the pattern used for making this rug, so we suggest that readers send 35c for a copy which may be returned for refund if not found abundantly useful.

Manufacturing job

Thyroxin, manufactured by the thyroid gland, is a substance which controls the body's metabolism or speed at which we live. To produce thyroxin, the gland requires iodine which must be supplied by the diet. A lack of iodine may cause the gland to swell, a condition known as simple goitre. Since the average diet does not supply this necessary amount of iodine, packaged salt which is used in cooking is iodized. By this means, the human body receives the small but required amount. Shellfish is a good natural source of iodine and it is also present in foods produced from soil which is rich in the mineral.

TO STOP MARITAL QUARRELS

How frequently do you have a heated argument with your wife? Don't answer me; it is none of my business. However, such arguments can be hard on the nerves, injurious to the health and annoying to the neighbors. Have you ever thought of an efficient way to halt a matrimonial brawl? I heard of a couple who, as soon as an argument starts, each takes a bite of molasses taffy. This makes it very difficult to talk and the argument usually ends up in a laugh. I also heard of a husband who, when his wife begins to bawl him out or nag him, turns on a music box which plays "I'll Be Loving You Always". That causes the wife to calm down and the argument generally ends with a "rainbow kiss". What is a "rainbow kiss"? That's a term for a kiss after a quarrel.

WIVES ON BUSINESS TRIPS

What do you think of the idea of businessmen, including travelling salesmen, taking their wives along on business trips. A Californian informs me he was connected with an advertising organization in which the top man suggested all executives take their wives along, at company expense on trips of more than a week's duration. The idea was that with his wife along a man would lead a more regular life. Also considered was that long separations of man and wife are not generally good for a marriage.

NO HONKING, NO SPEED LIMIT

There is no automobile speed limit in the city of Rome, Italy, and it is against the law to blow an auto horn. What worried me last time I was there was when a taxi driver, proceeding at high speed, approached an intersection without blowing the horn. Boy, that can really be hard on the nerves until you get used to it.

TRIUMPH OF HOPE

One-fifth of all the marriages in the U.S. are remarriages. So, if you have been married more than once, your experience is far from unusual. It has been said when a man marries again it is because he adored his first wife. That, of course, refers to widowers. Samuel Johnson described a second marriage as "a triumph of hope over experience." The doctor undoubtedly had divorced people in mind. Robert Herrick observed:

He loves his bonds
Who, when the first are broke,
Submits his neck unto a second yoke.

VOLUNTEERS WANTED

What's the longest motor car you have seen recently? Diana Dora, the conscientiously dynamic blonde actress, has a Delahaye car that is 22 feet long. She also has a Rolls Royce and a Cadillac. Again note it said "a lispless lass is good to kiss." Our horses and women experts have never been able to verify that. Perhaps among our readers there is a lispless lass who might volunteer to aid our experts to confirm this claim. Strictly, of course, as a scientific experiment.

Malaga, here we come

No doubt you know all about Spain's romantic Isle of Majorca, to which so many international celebrities are flocking this summer. Are you familiar with the Spanish port of Malaga on the Mediterranean. Malaga, which has a marvelous climate and long stretches of bathing beaches, is reported very easy on the bankroll. For $1.40 a day you can get board and room of first-rate quality. You can rent a beach house for $28 a month and there is no servant problem. When you dine out you can get a top-grade four-course dinner for about seventy cents.

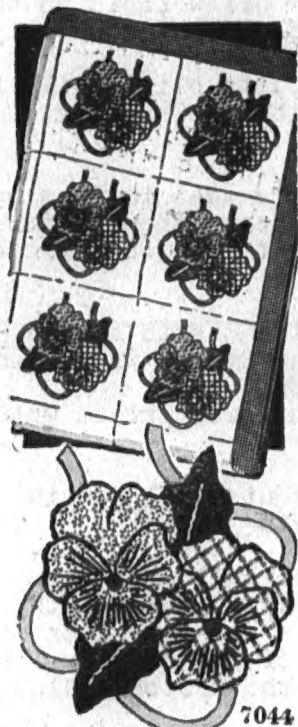

The beauties of Spain attribute their famed eyelashes to a simple home treatment: the Spanish ladies bathe their lashes frequently with olive oil.

The planet Saturn has nine moons.

The custom of monarchs speaking of themselves as "we" is the throwback to the days when there were two Roman emperors, one in Italy and one in Constantinople, who issued decrees under their joint authority, using the plural "we."

THE OBSERVER

BY HUGH PEARCE

Few men are destined to write their names in the annals of history. Yet every free man and woman is represented there as if their millions of signatures had been entered into the official book of the years. John Jones, Robert Brown, Henry Smith, their Marys, their Alices, their Evelyns -- these are the makers of history. In other words it is John Doe, His "Mark" which is the actual power behind the throne.

Though their signatures may only be written on the sands of time, to be washed away by the tides of succeeding generations, yet their unmistakable mark is on all events that build the present and on the blue print of the future. It is the mark of "X" that rules in every democratic country. This mark, made by the voter's hand on the secret ballot of his democratic elections, is the sign of his personal authority, his order to those elected men and women who will be his leaders, the order without which all would be chaos.

If the order which his authority has commanded should fail to please him, only one power shall countermand it - the power of his own mark inscribed again on a succeeding ballot, delegating his authority to yet another leader. Let him consider well the dispensation of this potent authority for, like the stone cast into a pool, though it disappears from sight, the waves it sets in motion impress their shape on distant shores.

Such is the power of the elector in our democratic society. Such is the power of the voter's cross. One stroke firm with authority and a second heavy with the weight of responsibility.

The John Does of this country must forever hold this veto power in sacred trust. One has only to observe the present conditions in dictator ruled countries to realize the end result of a laissez faire attitude on the part of the electors. Here is the one situation where it is fatal in the long run to sit back and "let George do it". It is not only John Doe's privilege to make his "Mark" in the manner of his choice, it is also his duty to his State to ensure that the ultimate power of government shall remain in his hands forever. Whether in federal, provincial or municipal fields, whenever the power of the ballot box and the mark of John Doe wanes, the seeds of dictatorship, corruption and chaos have at that moment been sown and from then on will require little encouragement to break into full bloom.

Our democratic way of life is, without a doubt, the most satisfactory type of government for the man in the street. Under this type of government, a man and his family may live in full security in his own castle, may choose the type of employment he prefers and may move in and about his own country in complete freedom. When you compare this freedom with the regimentation of dictator ruled countries, where a man is nothing more than a cog on a machine, it is an opportune time to warn John Doe that he is gradually creating, through lassitude and thoughtlessness, an ideal condition wherein dictatorship takes root and thrives. Seldom do more than half of the qualified voters cast their ballots at an election these days. The other half just sits at home and "lets George do it". May the time never come when "George" tires of carrying his neighbor's load of responsibility and also stays home. That will be the tragic demise of democracy. That will herald the tramp of a dictator's minions across the nation, undertaking to stamp out all signs of individualism and independence in each citizen. We will realize, too late, our freedom has gone!

Solving our wheat crisis

(From The News-Optimist, North Battleford, Sask.—Aug. 15, 1956)

Western Canada will in all probability face a new economic crisis this fall. Nature has been kind to the prairie grain farmer and another bumper crop will produce tremendous problem of grain storage and of grain sales.

There is no single answer which will clear all our problems, but a little realistic thinking by federal government officials could secure the economic future of western farmers and at the same time would strengthen the entire agrarian outlook throughout Canada.

There are two steps which could produce at least a partial answer to the grain farmer's plight. In the first place, some method of adequate terminal grain storage throughout the prairie area must be undertaken. Secondly, if prices of other commodities such as steel, newsprint, farm machinery, are to be continually increased in an inflationary arc, then it is essential that our farmers who consume such goods must be protected to an extent at least. Some basis of parity prices at home is only fair.

The News-Optimist proposes simply this: an adequate grain storage system and the payment of parity prices for agricultural goods sold on home markets would give our farm population some real protection in an age when every other industry has such protection through tariff walls. This is not an age of free trade. If it were our farmers could buy their farm machinery and other commodities at much lower prices on the world market where they must at the present time sell their wheat.

Last year many hundreds of thousands of bushels of the world's finest wheat rotted because western farmers could not afford to build proper storage facilities. An adequate government owned series of terminal storage elevators could have prevented this tremendous waste. But no action was taken last year, and action at this time could hardly aid the farmer with this year's bumper crop. We must work, however, for the future. A series of terminal elevators should be undertaken immediately so the grain waste will not continue to rob prairie farmers.

Parity prices would give Canadian agriculture a tremendous lift. Industrial workers since the war have been able to increase their standard of living in relation to the farmer because they have not only increased their efficiency, but because they have been protected by a tariff barrier. The farmer has no such protection. He must compete with the world.

We are told that about 20 percent of the wheat produced in Canada is consumed here. If a parity price were paid for grain consumed by Canadians it would in effect mean an overall increase of about 12 cents per bushel on every bushel of wheat produced by the nation's farmers. This new income to grain producers would give the entire economy a boost and would provide some long term stability to the agricultural scene—something that has not been apparent for many years.

We cannot allow only part of our nation to be prosperous. A sound agricultural economy is of fundamental importance to the entire nation. To achieve such a goal an adequate terminal grain storage program must be constructed. With the prosperity that Canadians are enjoying generally surely they could easily afford to pay a parity price for the wheat they consume.

Improving the forage stand

(From The Globe, Lacombe, Alta.—Aug. 2, 1956)

Where the brome-alfalfa crop seeded last year is not making the growth expected, attention is warranted. If the disappointing stand is due to a poor catch, reseeding will help; if low fertility is the cause, fertilizer use is indicated.

Unless the soil is dry, reseeding may be done anytime from the present until September 1, advises D. R. Walker, soils specialist at the Lacombe experimental farm. If seeding is not done before that date, delay it until the spring thaw wakes them to an early start, the danger of winter kill will be avoided. For general use on the black soils of Alberta a brome-alfalfa mixture seeded at the rate of 3 lbs. alfalfa to 7 lbs. brome per acre is recommended.

If a good catch followed seeding but succeeding growth was poor, a combination of the dry spring of 1956 and low fertility was likely the cause. Fertilizer application may be needed here, says Mr. Walker—either as commercial fertilizer or barnyard manure. On sandy soils the recommended commercial fertilizer in the black soil zone is 100 to 200 lbs. per acre of ammonium phosphate 16-20-0. On the heavier loam soils of the area 50 to 150 lbs. of 11-48-0 or 100 to 200 lbs. of 16-20-0 may be used.

Fertilizer may be applied in spring or fall depending on the labour situation and susceptibility of the land to spring flooding.

Lac la Plonge newest angling spot

They're raving about Lac la Plonge, five miles east of Beauval and 100 miles north-northwest of Meadow Lake, in northwestern Saskatchewan.

And no wonder, R. E. Callaway, a discerning angler from Shell Knob, Missouri, hooked a 38-pound great northern pike there on June 29. It's believed to be the biggest northern caught in the province this year and a sure bet to win the Saskatchewan Anglers' Derby.

Hall Rutton, of Des Moines, Iowa, is another satisfied Lac la Plonge man. He recently landed a 28-pound lake trout, while trolling the crystal-clear waters of the lake with deep-sea tackle.

Twenty-pound northern pike and trout are not uncommon in the 100-square-mile lake, which probably explains its skyrocketing popularity with both Saskatchewan and American sport fishermen.

This is the lake's second season and already some 1,500 anglers have visited the resort to date this year. The lake was made readily accessible to sport fishermen last fall, when the provincial natural resources department's construction branch pushed through the Green Lake-Beauval section of the Buffalo Narrows road.

The department is currently building a road from the settlement to the lake to replace an old trail tourists have been using.

W. H. "Bill" Sandherr, local tourist camp operator, thinks a midsummer family resort could be established on the sandy north shore of the lake and he may start on one next year. It would feature fishing, boating and swimming.

Sandherr's Lac la Plonge Log Cabins is the only outfitting and accommodation camp on the lake at present, and it's set up primarily for sport fishermen.

Sandherr believes the local sportfishing industry could be extended to the Beaver River, which flows by Beauval in a north-south direction and which he claims has "terrific pickerel fishing".

In time, he would like to set up sport fishing camps on Lac Ile a la Crosse and on up towards Patunak and the Churchill, in the Buffalo region.

"That country has a great tourist potential and the new Buffalo Narrows road going through will really open it up," he says.

TRY AND STOP ME!

By BENNETT ORP

Two wealthy Chinese merchants of San Francisco who were invited to spend a day at a country club outside Berkeley saw, for the first time, a couple of duffers trying to hack their way out of a sand trap.

"Wouldn't you think," observed Ah Sing, "that men as rich as that could get servants to perform such arduous and unpleasant labor for them?"

A gent who was a champion in the gentle art of getting into arguments, began expounding a position with increasing passion to a stranger next to him in the club car of the Santa Fe Chief. The stranger remained disturbingly uninterested.

The arguer hollered, "Don't you understand what I'm driving at? It's as simple as A-B-C."

"Could be," replied the stranger calmly, "but I am D-E-F."

A kindly warden summoned a long-term prisoner and said, "Joe, frankly, you've got me concerned. You're the only con here who hasn't had a visitor this year. Haven't you any relative who cares about you?"

"I got lots of 'em, Warden," maintained the prisoner, "but all of 'em's right in here for longer stretches than me!"

A Pasadena socialite, guiding a Hollywood starlet through her greenhouse, pointed to one plant and explained, "That belongs to the begonia family."

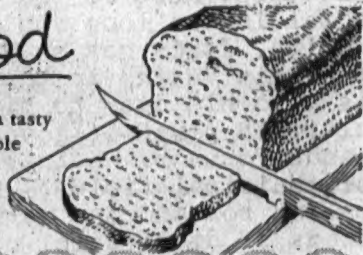

"How darling of you," gushed the starlet, "to look after it while they're away!"

A lad in New England wrote to the admission office of an old university requesting "catalogues and stickers, and penance." He got back the catalogues and stickers, but the dean of admission suggested, "For penance, may I suggest a few hours a day with a good dictionary?"

A RECIPE FOR LOVE

Love is made of tenderness, Love is made of fire,
Of glory and of wonder, of longing and desire.
Of dreams and hopes and fantasies, of passion and of pain,
Of showers after sunshine and sunshine after rain.But Love that lasts a lifetime is of more material stuff,
It's made of dogged patience when the going's rather rough;
It's made of understanding and a lot of little things,
The irks and quirks and jolts and jerks that daily living brings.Love that lasts a lifetime has a sense of humor too,
Which only grins at silly things that wives and husbands do;

RADIOS AND BASEBALL

No, it wasn't an air raid alarm that made most of the Bassano business places appear to be so deserted on Wednesday afternoon. The usually alert merchants were merely giving their full attention to the first game of the Worlds Series as it was broadcasted over the radio and, at the same time, were weighing their chances of winning the pool.Incidentally the game was a thriller and was eventually won by the Dodgers, 6 to 3.

A secret of pass defence

Football teams from the University of Tennessee have, over the past decade, become famous for their consistently good pass defense. According to the Tennessee coaching staff, one of the big reasons for this is the emphasis they place on teaching the skill of running backwards and manoeuvring from side to side while doing so.

Although there are times when a defending player must turn his back on the play to go with his man, 90 percent of the time he can do his covering while moving backwards, provided he has developed this skill. Such a type of covering is immeasurably superior to any other because he can keep the whole situation in view and is in a position to make the right move when the ball is thrown.

With practise, it's possible to learn to run very fast backwards while still maintaining good balance and ability to move quickly to left or right while doing so. It's said that the famous dancer, Bill "Bojangles" Robinson, could run 100 yards backwards in close to 10 seconds. Apart from practising just your backwards running, however, remember to work on your ability to start and stop and move from side to side as well.

A between-period jack-up

Sports College frequently is asked, "What is a good, harmless stimulant to use between periods of play or between events?"

While we're against such artificial stimulants as benzedrine, there are several good, natural jack-ups. Our favorite is a mixture made from tea, honey and orange juice. The proportions are six bags of tea to a pint of water (brewed for five minutes), six teaspoons of honey, and orange juice to taste. It is served cool, but never ice cold. We give four to six ounces about 20 minutes before activity, and between periods of play. This mixture, while pleasant to taste and easily digested, definitely has an energizing and refreshing effect. We recommend it to any coach, trainer or athlete looking for a quick, safe and effective stimulant for use in sports.

Helpful Hints

Onions and garlic will be much easier to peel if kept in the refrigerator for about an hour before using.

Vinegar, ordinary cider vinegar, is fine for etching new galvanized iron before painting. Vinegar mixed with salt is good for cleaning copper and vinegar and warm water are good for softening hardened glue.

When making slipcovers for furniture, always choose closely woven material. They will then give greater protection against dust, hold their shape better, and tailor more easily.

Here's a French chef trick: Coat chops and cutlets with equal parts of grated Parmesan cheese and dry bread crumbs before cooking.

Never scrub a pile upholstery fabric such as corduroy, velvet or velour. It will mat the surface. Better results are obtained by brushing the fabric against the nap, with a damp brush.

Wash old powder puffs and keep them with your cleaning equipment to use in applying wax polish to furniture and kitchen surfaces.

ICE CREAM TIPS

Ice cream serving at home is made easier if you observe these tips:

(1) For a la mode service, dip out servings of ice cream ahead of time. Keep them in the freezer not over 3 hours. For sundaes, dip out servings and fill service dishes 2-3 hours before serving; keep in freezer. For parfaits, fill glasses with syrup and ice cream, ready for whipped cream topping. Keep in freezer.

(2) Make ice cream pies by filling baked crusts with ice cream; wrap and freeze. At service time, top with thick meringue and bake at 500 deg. F.

HUNTER - FARMER RELATIONS

According to E.S. Huestis, Fish and Game Commissioner for Alberta, only a small percentage of the hunters have caused the farmers any trouble and forced them in past years to post their land against hunters. Also only a small percentage of the farmers will refuse to allow hunters on their lands when permission is asked.

The few hunters that ignore the rights of the farmer and cause damage and nuisance to the farmer's property are probably the same persons that will break other laws which they consider restricting to their personal liberty to do as they please. The law may be there to protect persons including the hunter but still he objects. Unfortunately no matter what laws may be enacted to control hunters and farmers, these same persons will still cause trouble.

During 1954 and 1955, Section 8 of the Game Act provided that a farmer could post his land with "NO SHOOTING" signs. These signs had to be at least 10" x 14" with black lettering on a white background. They had to be placed at each corner and each gate of the farm. If the land was posted, hunters were prohibited from hunting on the land without the consent of the owner or occupant. The farmer, having posted his land to control those who hunted, could not sell the hunting rights to any person. This same prohibition is contained in the Game Act as amended in 1956.

Following representations from farmer organizations, it was decided to amend Section 8 of the Game Act during the 1956 session of the Legislature. The passing of this section brought out a great deal of discussion in the Legislature, the press and on the radio as to the effectiveness of the legislation to deal with the problem. Section 8 first defined the term "occupied lands" as privately owned lands under cultivation or enclosed by a fence of any kind and upon which or adjoining which the owner or occupant is actually residing. The act then states that no person shall hunt any big game or game bird upon or over occupied lands without the consent of the owner or occupant first being obtained.

This year then, permission must be obtained to hunt on occupied lands without the owner or occupant having to post "NO SHOOTING" signs. If, however, the owner or occupant posts "NO SHOOTING" or "NO HUNTING" signs on his land, the Game Act now prohibits the farmer or any other person from hunting big game or game birds on the land. It should be pointed out to the farmer that if he had "NO SHOOTING" signs posted in 1955 and has neglected to remove them in 1956, he has made a game sanctuary on his land as neither he nor anyone else may hunt on land so posted. If the farmer or his family wishes to hunt on his land or allow others to hunt with his permission, the signs will have to be removed. He is now protected under the act without posting as hunters now must obtain permission to hunt on any "occupied land" as defined above.

You will note that the definition of "occupied land" states that the land must be fenced or under cultivation and especially that the owner or occupant must reside on the land or adjoining land. This is intended to require that the hunter must obtain permission to hunt on what might be called the "home place" but he could hunt without permission on land owned by the same farmer which was not occupied and may lie some distance down the road. Furthermore "occupied land" is intended to mean privately owned land and does not apply to fenced grazing leases. They are defined as Crown land in the act and anyone may hunt on these without permission. If the hunter, in hunting on these leases, makes a nuisance of himself, however, the holder of the grazing lease may prosecute for trespass under the Criminal Code.

If all hunters will treat the farmer and his property in the same way they would have the farmer treat theirs, there should be little trouble during the coming hunting season.
